Fortunately, these days, that attitude is all but eradicated, as women are open to supporting other women, as they are familiar with the struggles they must go through. A Los Angeles based empowerment photography, Brio Five, mission is to inspire women to be the best in their life and career. When women support other women they are more likely to be successful as they feel supported by their fellow women and they feel that they are working together instead of working against each other.

We got down by (26) and they kept competing.""We were just too inconsistent shooting the ball offensively and had a hard time putting the ball in the basket," Donovan continued. "We had some breakdowns defensively that probably never allowed us to keep it somewhat close because we struggled so much to put it in the basket."81 points is rarely, if ever enough to be competitive in an NBA game, and the Thunder only amassed that many because as a group it only shot 36.2 percent from the field and only attempted 13 free throws all night. The Thunder did manage to knock down 13 three pointers, but only took 23 shots in the paint.
