Aller/Getty ImagesThe Los Angeles Rams have a championship caliber offense and a front seven that can wreck opponents around the line of scrimmage. What they are lacking is a rock solid secondary. Fortunately for the Rams, this year's draft class is loaded with quality cornerbacks Ohio State's Denzel Ward among them. And while his stats don't tell a big story Ward had just two interceptions through three seasons with the Buckeyes he's a shutdown corner who could thrive in man coverage along the boundary or in the slot at the next level. The Carolina Panthers receiving corps, because of a blend of injuries and midseason departures, wasn't exactly steady in 2017.But if you look at the big picture, Carolina is only one piece away from providing quarterback Cam Newton with a dynamite arsenal of weapons. For the time being, the Panthers boast a steady boundary receiver in Devin Funchess, a slot maven in running back Christian McCaffrey, a vertical field stretcher in 2017 second round pick Curtis Samuel and a safety blanket in veteran tight end Greg Olsen. Add Texas A Christian Kirk to the mix opposite Funchess, and the Panthers should have no problem fielding one of the NFC's more formidable passing games under new offensive coordinator Norv Turner. During his three year stay with the Aggies, Kirk racked up 234 receptions for 2,856 yards and 26 touchdowns including 10 over 13 games as a junior."I set my goals high," Kirk told NFL Media's Jeffri Chadiha. "I had high aspirations coming into college, and I wanted to be a player that people talked about.
