I hadn't had any previous experience in football besides my days on the middle school playground. Practices were long and left me exhausted. As all of the other kids were picked up by their parents, I prepared myself for the long walk home. It starts with a guy on the action communicating what's happening behind him. Then, it's the three guys' responsibility to protect that guy, and it's not just one action because normally teams try to run multiple actions and they have counters for everything, especially good teams like Washington, teams that will be in the playoffs. They were seeing the first action taken away, so you have to pay attention and concentrate.
