Ernie Accorsi and Rich Dalrymple are the only non players or coaches to be interviewed for the series both were team administrators. Of the "Blue Ribbon" top 20 teams, the San Francisco 49ers and are represented most often as a franchise with three championship teams each. The Green Bay Packers,, and Oakland/Los Angeles Raiders are each represented twice. According to Steve Sabol, president of NFL Films, only 20 teams were ranked instead of 40 because they feared negative mail from fans of the franchise whose team was ranked the lowest.[3] Sabol stated that, while the panel chose the 1972 Dolphins as the $ar{1}$ team, several voters hedged and said Miami's unbeaten season was "the greatest team achievement." Of the voting methods. Sabol said. "That's what I think people were voting on, rather than, 'Could this team beat the '85 Bears?"[4]For its initial airings the show was divided into two waves, with the first series being a weekly series counting down the top 20 winning teams, as selected by a 53 person panel of "Blue Ribbon" experts on the NFL.[3] The first 18 episodes aired on NFL Network beginning in November 2006 and the final two programs on CBS the day before Super Bowl XLI in February 2007. The remaining 20 champions' episodes aired during the NFL's off season, February through April, before the 2007 season began. The first episode of the remaining 20 champions aired on Thursday, February 8, 2007. The show began its run with a one hour "preview special" at 8:30 Eastern time on November 17, 2006. followed by the first of the countdown shows the following week.

Ifedi had particular trouble with false starts, sometimes moving early in an attempt to get a split spencer paysinger jersey second head start brandon wilds jersey in pass protection as opposed to reflexively jumping. The breakdown of his 20 total penalties: nine false starts, eight holds, two unnecessary roughness penalties and one for unsportsmanlike conduct. Of Bennett's 15 total penalties, 13 were for either offside. encroachment or neutral zone infraction.

I'm working on a form for user input, and one of the items (a multiple option select) has an christian hackenberg jersey inordinate amount of choices (1600), so it's gotta get filtered down to be digestible. I've got 3 filter fields (dropdowns) that I'm requiring to have completed before I make an AJAX call back to the DB and get an updated list. It's similar to How to filter connor harris jersey the options of a drop down list using craig watts jersey another drop down list, however I also don't want to lose any items that were previously selected.