The intense media scrutiny surrounding the case overshadowed the obvious outcome that should have followed. Many may believe that justice was served in the trial. However, this is not the case in my opinion. If a guy fumbles, the cutoff point is when his elbow, knee, butt, etc. Is down. It doesn matter how many of those parts are down or if he still on his way to falling.

The professional athletes that people look up too are most of the time bad role models and the ones who are the real heros don't get noticed at all. They entertain and are fun to watch but don't affect our society in any big way. Other careers like doctors who save lives everyday don't make anything compared to the highest paid athletes.
