Wacha and Ozuna are both under contractual control through 2019, and have both had their serious star potential countered by bouts with the blues Ozuna's 2015 season, which saw him demoted to Triple A, and Wacha's injury affected 2016, in which he posted a 5.09 ERA. They would each bring youth and promise to positions where the teams involved are most in need. Wacha's past shoulder issues might offset his credentials as a former All Star and NL Championship Series MVP and inherently limit his trade value, which is why I've paired him with Garcia, who will make $12 million before hitting free agency a year from now.
