Being a Jazz fan, and being the future at all other 4 starting positions seems to be locked, would you be opposed to them drafting PGs with both first round picks? Say McColum as the safety net and Kabongo for the upside? Let them battle it out best case scenerio you strike gold with two talented pgs, where McColum can be the brisly estime jersey combo off the bench. If this is the case, they can sign n trade Jefferson and/or Milsap for depth at other positions. I woudnt bash them for taking the "Khan" approach here bc pg position is a question mark for them.
