The problem is he is not ready to get help. Nothing really shocking has happened to him yet, no traffic accidents where someone is hurt or killed, he hasn gotten arrested for anything major, he hasn been fired yet and left high and dry without money(that probably won happen) or where no other team is willing to take a chance on him. Until some shock factor happens he is not going to change.

There is no good reason why Auckland should be performing so badly. They have the players but the way they are playing there appears to be no notion of teamwork in their approach. It continues to be frustrating when so many gifted players from the Auckland union are propping up other sides in the competition while the players from their home region are struggling.
