Meanwhile, a new coach will be hired. And that new coach may not want Kaepernick. Like Josh McDaniels six years ago in Denver, the first order of business for the next 49ers coach could be to find a new quarterback. In Martin's case, he certainly did not confide in coaches. He had one session with a team affiliated psychiatrist, at the behest of his mother. Following the bullying scandal, head coach Joe Philbin said: "We're going to look at every avenue."

I guess I'm getting a little off track but my main point is that we value these numbers too much at times. A guy who is a 6 9 'ideal height' power forward should not be accepted as being automatically superior to a guy who is smaller. Look at Kenneth Faried.

Bad Team A fires their coach after week 17 and has their eye on a hot assistant of Good Team B and they're willing to wait for him. Bad Team C also fires their coach after week 17 and hires a new head coach right away. Team C's new coach now has his pick of assistants and can put together a top staff quickly.
