5. Jacksonville Jaguars (6 3)You can spit and sputter all you want about how ugly the Jaguars played in the fourth quarter and overtime in Sunday's victory over the Los Angeles Chargers. But at 6 3, the Jaguars are exceptionally well positioned for their first trip to the playoff in 10 years.

Hazell is quietly one of the best scorers in the nation, averaging 23.4 ppg. Obviously he doesn't have enough hype around him to come out this year, but he's only a custom jersey sophomore, and I think he could be a lottery pick by 2011 if he adds some weight to his thin frame and continues to score at will. Cummard shoots an unreal 56% from the field as a custom jersey shooting guard, and is an above average rebounder as well.

Chicago Bulls (13th place, 8 games out): Sellers. Chicago already started the selling process when they traded Nikola Mirotic to the New Orleans Pelicans. The Bulls will reportedly listen to offers for veterans Robin Lopez and Justin Holiday, as well as Tony Allen and Jameer Nelson, both of whom were acquired in the Mirotic trade.

It amazing that Elway has the nerve to make such an offer. He signs other QB but then is trying to negotiate with Kaep. Seems to me he not sold that he can ride present company on the squad to another SB win?? If he not sold then he needs to Up make the trade and accept Kaep contract as is and make up the difference somewhere else.
