Isn't a good enough three point shooter to rely on that part of his game. Settles for too many stepback jumpers at times. Has no rhythm on his spot up/catch and shoot jumpers. For now, it's also safe to presume that Thursday night games like last week's between the Rams and 49ers are the exception instead of the rule. Trusting the Bears is dangerous, especially when it comes to the Packers rivalry and prime time. The Bears were one Marcus Cooper gaffe from dominating the Steelers last week and possibly not needing overtime to win.

Which football is, because of the way hitting and tackling are a part of the game. The way hitting is taught is by use of the helmet and facemask. The person that is tackling the opponent is taught to put the top of their helmet where the facemask.
