That math doesn't add up. That's like when Wilt claimed to have slept with over 20,000 women. If he had slept with even a 10th of that he would've never had pants on. There's also the possibility that the running back market may have changed permanently. Bell's $12.1 million franchise tag figure isn't just the largest cap hit for any running back in football; it's 36.6 percent more than the second largest cap hit for a back (McCoy at $8.875 million) and 74.4 percent more than the third largest figure (DeMarco Murray at $6.95 million). If the Steelers franchise Bell again in 2018, he'll make $14.5 million, which would be way ahead of McCoy and more than double the third largest cap hit of Ezekiel Elliott.

Tom King had the program going in the right direction until he decided to play Detroit for $10,000.
