Woodhead went undrafted in the 2008 NFL Draft. However, he received a call from the New York Jets moments before the draft ended, about the two parties coming to an agreement on an undrafted rookie free agent contract. It was announced shortly after, that Woodhead had signed a deal with the organization.[7].

Some positions have more than one coach, some teams have co deshon foxx jersey coordinators, some teams have a special teams coordinator. You might think it odd that professionals presumably the best trained and most experienced and highly skilled players at this particular sport on Earth would need so many coaches, but those billions of NFL dollars have to be spent on something. Blame it on the football industrial complex..
