Romo's athletic ability was evident even at an early age when he was selected for the Little League All Star team. Romo started as quarterback for the Burlington Demons beginning as a junior (1996) season). During his junior season, he led the Demons to a SLC Conference record of 7 2 and the WIAA playoffs.

The Blues began the 1926 NFL season disappointingly with a 21 0 loss to the New York Giants. The team later added two losses in back to back games against the Frankford Yellow Jackets and a loss 6 0 loss to the Brooklyn Lions, at Ebbets Field. The team would go on to only win three games during the season, against the Brooklyn Lions 16 6, the Dayton Triangles 16 0, and the Canton Bulldogs 16 7 in a game that ended early due to darkness and a lack of field lights.

In the game, he had 69 yards on 17 carries with a touchdown, but the injury ended his USFL career. Dupree agreed and began working out, losing 100 pounds in just over three months and going back to running a 4.3 40 yard dash. In October 1990, Dupree signed with the Los Angeles Rams, who had drafted him in 1986 in case he became healthy again,[10] after a five and a half year absence from the football field.
