Finally, it has become clear to us that sharing hard data with vendors about the risk posed to our mutual customers can be key to getting traction. Throughout the last year we have leveraged the MSRC telemetry gathering capabilities, both internal to Microsoft and via our MAPP partnerships, to help provide clarity to vendors during situations in which we believed our mutual customers to be at real risk from zero day vulnerabilities of which they may not have been aware. This has required us to communicate clear and validated data that vendors could use to better prioritize and expedite their engineering processes relative to the trade offs that they have to make.
