Roku took shortcuts on hardware in search of value. They thought by developing Brightscript they could get people to develop apps for the Roku and it would make up for their shortcomings and they could compete with more powerful devices like the ATV or FTV. However it just highlights how weak the boxes are and developers hate programming for the thing.

Dhillon said there was a "loud pop then we saw a lot of flames suddenly rise up by themselves. Then just this huge mountain of fire, almost pyramid shaped and spiralling as it was shooting fireballs into the air. There is a huge trail of thick black smoke".
