I'm sorry, is this the overrated list? Well, all things are cyclical, and there has been so much "Joe Namath is overrated" talk throughout the years that he is actually now underrated. It's hard to be underrated publicly as a Hall of Famer, but there is enough opinion that Namath is unworthy that he qualifies. Many of the online lists I viewed (those that went past 20, as Namath was never in the Top 20), had him in the 40's, below several non Hall of Famers..

backed up an 8 0 burst towards the end of the first half that helped Donovan's group recover from an 8 point Houston advantage. All told, the stretch to span the end of the first and start of the second half was a 15 4 Thunder run. The defense ratcheted up to another level during that portion of the game, as the Thunder made 3 steals and a block, generated 5 turnovers and forced 6 missed shots on 7 attempts during the 5 and a half minute period. As expected heading into the game, the free throw line was a major factor all night long, as the Thunder did still foul three point shooters and get put into binds on drives into the paint. Houston is notorious for their ability to bait opponents into fouls, and the Thunder knows it needs to be more disciplined and aware moving forward.
