"Our expectation is our young guys will have a more consistent, more defined role," said Paxson. "There was too much inconsistency in the rotations and trying to plug holes from game to game. Our expectation as an organization (going into last season) was to be competitive, but also create an environment where our young players grew and developed in a competitive environment.

To manage money. I strongly believe that this knowledge of money management should start in high school so that our students are better prepared when they get to college. In Scott Gamm's article, College Students Lack Money Management Skills, Gamm states the fact of "Millions of students graduate from high school and head off to college with barely any financial knowledge." Based on my friends' and my own experience this is true.
