Goodell probably realizes this is a no win PR situation for him. If he finds the Pats guilty, everyone will scream about why they delayed the investigation and did not take any draft choices. If he finds no conclusive evidence of guilt, he will have NE all over him.

Every time you gulp down a Slurpee, thank the Lone Star State. Back in 1927, Southland Ice Company employee "Uncle Johnny" Jefferson Green started selling staples (think milk, bread, eggs) at the company's pop up ice house storefronts. The grocery items were such a hit that the company rolled the idea out to its 21 retail docks, and the convenience store was born! The ice docks eventually evolved into Tote'm Stores, which were later renamed 7 Eleven to reflect the stores' original operating hours in 1946.
